Congress Still Discussing Silver.

Both Houses Take Up the Subject.

The Senate Passes Maricopa County's Subsidy Bill as It Came from the House.

the vacancy in national bank circulation be made up, but there ought to be added to that at least as much as would result from the free coinage of silver. He was willing to abandon his idea of fixed money and to widen the base of the credit structure by adding to it all the silver that the United States mints could turn out. According to the best data there was less than $60,000,000 worth of silver mined every year in the United States. Of that, some $30,000,000 was used in arts and only $17,000,000 could be used in free coinage. It was to be remembered that the national bank circulation was being every day

Mr. Plumb went on to speak of the silver bill in connection with the question of protection. The Senate was appealed to yesterday by the Senator from New York (Hiscock) against the bill, in the sacred name of protection. Silver was an American product, a much larger product than many others which were to be protected by duties of 200 or 400 per cent. Under the coinage tariff bill he would like to ask the Senator from New York, who was so anxious about foreign commerce what he intended to do with a tariff bill which would prevent the United States from baving any foreign commerce. He hoped he might interpret the Senator's remarks on that point as a hopeful augury of the action of that Senator in putting his knife into the bill now before the Finance committee, a bill which would raise the price of nearly everything used by the masses of the people.

The House.

Washington, June 6.-The silver debate was resumed this morning, Mr. Lind of Minnesota, being the first speaker. He said silver should be restored to its former position. This was demanded by the great mass of the American people,

Mr. Lacy of Iowa, said the country was met with a contraction of the cur-The pending bill proposed to country an increase to offset the contraction and even more. It was practically a free coinage bill. The capacity of the mints was $51,000,000. The free coinage of every dollar of American silver would be about $51,060,000, yet this bill pro-posed to give $54,000,000 a year of legal ender treasury notes. It was a free coinage measure because it provided that when silver was at par the mints should be open to free coinage. The country needed an expansion of the cur-rency in a safe and reliable way and this bill provided for it.

Mr. Walker of Massachusetts, spoke against free coinage. He asserted that the demonetization of silver was not the cause of a decrease in prices. Prices had been going down for a hundred years. More money meant more misery Mr. Perkins of Kansas, remarked in that connection, "We all love misery."

Mr. Walker added that he was going to vote for the pending bill because members of the House from 1868 up to the present time for the purpose of getting back here had urged and en-couraged the people in their folly until siev had come to such a state of mind something must be done or it would break members up. measure.

Mr. Bland of Missouri, said he could only protest against the abridgement of the right of a member of the minority to offer an amendment.

The gag law placed upon the minority for the purpose of passing a bill through the House the effect of which was to demonetize silver, was a Wall-street scheme and a gold bug scheme to change the ratio between gold and silver. It recognized silver bullion according to its gold value. Silver was being murdered in the house of its friends. He especially criticized the bullion redemption clause, arguing that it would prevent any appreciable expansion of the currency; it would hold out temptation to the Secretary of the Treasury to make mil-

The Senator from New York (Hiscock) had yesterday described the great wealth and prosperity of the country, but if the picture was true, why was it the Senator and his committee had been piling up protection duties?
